Objective Jail Classification and Beyond

February 18–20, 2019 Los Angeles, California

Co-Hosted By:

This seminar provides participants with best business practices that are supported through research, evidence, and case law in implementing an objective jail classification process. The seminar begins with a basic overview of the fundamentals of OJC and advances into housing plans for special populations, needs assessments, reclassification of offenders, disciplinary infractions, keep separates, gangs, protective custody, programming, reentry, and sustainability of an implemented OJC process. The seminar guides participants in the development of policies, procedures, and data collection relevant to classification, reclassification, and housing plans. The seminar identifies stakeholders that can provide funding, leadership, training, and programs to support a progressive approach to mitigating risk. Attendees are given a case study to classify, house, re-classify, and to provide programs and reentry services during this 2.5 day seminar.

At the end of this course, participants possess the knowledge to:

- Understand the correlation between identifying risk and need with reducing liability.
- Identify valid criteria to assess risk.
- Understand the components of an Inmate Behavior Management process.
- Correlate the need of data collecting relevant to an inmate housing plan.
- Develop an action plan through an agency self-evaluation.
