Use of Force: Duty to Intervene

Duty to intervene is the legal and moral obligation of an officer to prevent any staff member from committing a verbally or physically abusive act. Join Carrie Hill as she shares with you the court cases that have set the precedence in claims of excessive force, deliberate indifference and the theory of bystander liability. Knowing the law and up-to-date policies and procedures can protect you, your colleagues and those persons under your care.